IN THE LOOP

Alameda County Project Stabilization Community Benefits Agreement (PSCBA) Updates

CHANGE IS COMING! TAKE CARE.

The world is opening back up and our many roles - at home, at work, and in the community - seem to be ever changing.

In the March edition of In The Loop, we shared the benefits of yoga and meditation when dealing with stress - tools for your mental health toolbox. This month, we build upon those tools and incorporate mindfulness. Mindfulness, according to mindful.org, is the basic human ability to be present, take note of what you're feeling and not be overly reactive or overwhelmed by what's going on around us."

Over the next few months, as you venture out into the world and connect with more and more people, be mindful of your response to different experiences, viewpoints and changes that comes your way.

And lastly, remember to just breathe. We're all in this together.

Are you unemployed & Interested in construction?

Last year the County of Alameda updated the 2013 Project Stabilization Community Benefits Agreement that requires contractors to hire Alameda County residents to work on certain construction projects. So, if you are unemployed, foster youth, formerly incarcerated, homeless/unsheltered, or on any public assistance, do NOT let any of those things stop you! Inside are articles and resources that can help start your journey to a career in construction today!

Personal Development Corner

We recently discovered a free tool - The Marcus Buckingham Company's (TMBC) Strengths Assessment StandOut 2.0. Among many benefits, this "situational judgement test" shines a light on the greatest value you can bring to a team.

Here is what you need to know:

- Find 15 minutes of quiet time.
- StandOut relies on your top-of-mind reactions, so it's deliberately timed.
- Take it in one sitting.
- You will get your 14-page results immediately.

Why Everyone Should Have a Coach

It doesn't matter what discipline you are in, having a coach is imperative to your growth and development. There seems to be a bit of confusion when one is asked what's the difference between a mentor and a coach.

Depending on who you ask, some may see both as having some cross over when discussing what the differences are.

Frankly, there is a difference. Simply put a mentor is usually someone that works in the same company as the mentee but at a more senior level. A mentor is a person who can draw upon their experience to help the mentee to progress. However, some people may also find mentors outside of the work environment. These mentors may be found through various networking or professional organizations.

A coach on the other hand is someone that has gone through training and certification from an accredited organization such as the International Coach Federation (ICF). The coach receives compensation. The relationship between a coach and a client is one where the coach has a focus on development. He/she provides guidance to the client to help them to achieve their goals.

Coaches use formal assessment tools with their clients to assist them with assessing areas of development, identifying areas of focus while getting to know the client and what they value as important.

Coaching is a process that allows an individual or group of people to reflect and gain awareness of who they are and what is important to them. It also focuses on strengths, challenges, and options open to them.

Some coaches use a directive approach whereas other use a non-directive approach. In a non-directive coach setting, the coach asks questions of the client to allow them to find their own solutions. The coach does not offer advice or give suggestions. Non-directive counseling uses skillful questioning to assist the client to gain clarity.

Directive coaching is where the coach offers options, solutions, tools, and techniques to assist the client to move forward. Either way, the coach holds the client accountable for their actions.

A Good Read

The Four Agreements

Here's a simple, yet profound book we find helpful when thinking about a personal credo. As we close out the first six months of the year, many of us are contemplating what the rest of the year will look like, and how we want to be intentional.

Here's an invitation to pause and add this practice to your toolkit for decision making and self compassion. This best selling author urges us to employ these four steps as we refine our personal code of conduct. . .

"When you don't take things personally, it gives you immunity"

The Four Agreements:

1. Be Impeccable With Your Word
2. Don't Take Things Personally
3. Don't Make Assumptions
4. Always Do Your Best

Check it out - think of it as a practice, not a one and done, but get curious about what's beneath the agreements and how these answers can drive transformational change in the ways in which you move about in the world.
